

Are you satisfied with your performance?
If not, what would you change?

take less classes

I would have liked to get a better GPA

attend more A+ reviews to obtain higher grades

time management

My grades

I will change my study habits and try not to stress myself any more, I will balance between school and social life. I will do my best this semester.

I need to spend more time studying

Better study habits and time management.

I would have managed my time better. I also should have had higher expectations of myself as well as a better attitude toward my performance.

Would read more often

I understand that SDSU is going through some major changes financially and academically. With that said, my finance major, I would like to have more options in the professors I choose. My FIRST and only F under my college career here and elsewhere was with Prof. Andreev (which came to a total shock to me). Doesn't it seem a bit surprising that I passed all my other classes with above average markings yet with his class, I failed? I'd like a new professor teaching that class, please!

I will prioritize my classes next semester and not look at them with the same weight.

I would like to change the way I managed my time.

I could dedicate more time to studying and the use of tutors.

I would seek more help in Accounting 321.

I would have put more time into studying but that was difficult with 50+ hours of work per week.

Devote more time to studying, and actual try to find an interest in my Accounting classes for subsequent semesters.

I would have begun the process of reviewing materials for the next test sooner. I had 3 A's and a B. The B happened due to the scores on my last test because I miscalculated the amount of time I had to study. This next semester I plan to have my study time prepared well in advance of the test.

take less classes and work less

How much time i spend on studying, i felt that i didnt put enough time into studying each subject. I also was very stressed which led to migranes and that also reduced the time i had to study.

I would take less classes.

Spend more time studying. Make time to speak with my instructor so that I can get a clear understanding of the subject matter.

I wish I would have spent more time studying because I thought I was going to do better. I spent too much time doing social stuff. It was hard for me because it was my first time moving away from home, going to a new school, upper division, and trying to make new friends. I hope to have a higher GPA this next semester.

I would like to spend more time studying at the library better time management from the beginning....have more work out time at the ARC....getting better rest and sleep hours concentrate more on my classes even if they arent particularly relevant to my career goals

I would have liked to have balanced studying for finals better so I could maintain my GPA of 4.0

Focus on studying more.

nothing i just had two really bad teachers....

i wish i had more interested teachers. (i.e accounting 202 - tool)

I would study more before a test

I just wish I had the study skills I needed for the amount of work I had this past semester.

My study habits and my time management. I would have gone to the tutors that were being offered by the school for any help I needed and spend more time on areas that I needed to focus on more.

Looking back there are some areas in which I could have done better if I were not so intimidated by my overall workload.

I wanted a higher GPA, so I would change my study habits to help improve my grades.

My study skills

I would've spent more time studying than what I've been used to in the past, because the upper division courses, specifically ACCTG 321 demanded more of my attention.

Made the mistake of taking FIN-323 while taking ACCT-321. I was not accustomed to the type of instruction given in ACCT-321 (Read and learn everything on your own (before) class discussion/lecture on the subject. Difficulty in knowing/deciding what to focus on amidst all the voluminous material. I was shooting for at least a C, but I had health issues twice during the semester and ended up getting a C in ACCT-321. First C ever received in college. If I could have, I would have just taken ACCT-321 and nothing else, but that is impossible. I felt the class was designed to weed people out of the major. I guess I survived; but barely.

Study more effectively at the beginning of the course rather than cram it in at the end

I will not take on as many extra-curricular activities such as coaching soccer so that I can allow more time to balance school, work, and my family.

I would have paid better attention to the exam dates in my stats class and managed my time better in the class I had the most difficulty in.

I would change going to each class on time especially during tests, and not to give up no matter what in any class tests or assignments.

Study some subjects more and taking advantage of more study time when i had it.

I would have pushed harder through finals week to get a higher grade. I was a couple of percentages away from the next letter grade and if I would have went the extra mile on my finals I could have had a better grade.

I Would have studied differently

Working less!!!!

Need to STUDY more

Work less and study more.

I wish I would've done better in all of my classes in order to achieve a higher GPA.

I will need to increase my class prep hours and be more thorough in revising materials covered in class.

I need to make more time to study, it won't be easy. I am a full-time mom and I am having a hard time managing everything. I know that I should not complain about having a 3.5 gpa for Fall, I'm just a little frustrated because I know I could have got a 4.0.

time spent on it

better grades

I would have spent more time reading my textbooks and studying harder for my final exams. Therefore improving my overall GPA for the semester.

More hours in the day

I need to work less at my job , and find time to study more and make sure its effective studying and not just wasting my time learning nothing.

I felt like I had overstudied and did not perform as well as I know I could have. I put much more stress on myself than what was necessary.

I would spend more time managing my study habits.

I had two deaths in my family and I had a difficult time focusing in school. Most of my instructors were understanding and allowed me to make up some missed assignment with the exception of Professor Lois Olson in the Marketing Department. As a result, I earned a D in her class which affected my overall GPA, bringing it down to a 3.25. I am disappointed in Professor Olson's lack of compassion.

Work less study more

Get a higher GPA.

Study even harder.

Studying like a mad man

Better study habits and less work to have more time to study.

I have quit my job in order to focus more on studies.

I was having medical issued that affected my performance. I have been working toward becoming better and I hope that it will pay off.

I would've focused less on Accounting 321 study more, work on time management.

My concentration level

i would definitely set aside more time studying and keep a constant communication with my peers and professors.

I should have less stress and take care of myself more.

Higher GPA

more organization

Increase hours of study to achieve higher grade and GPA

Better time management to allow for more time studying

Use my time wisely and study as much as I can!

My plannings for study, and my study habits. Also I want ot improve my time management.

my study habits and time management.

It has been hard for me to concentrate in classes. I don't know why because I have always got good grades at high school and college. At SDSU instructors grade only with tests, and I'm not a good test taker, I know I need to concentrate and prepare better for my classes.

No, i didn't have as much time as i would have liked to study

I wish I could have focused more. I was going through some rough times at home and in my life and it became very difficult for me to focus.
