

Greg Hoobler
Sibylline

Greg Hoobler is the Director of Client Engagement with Sibylline, a strategic geopolitical security and risk intelligence firm. He previously held senior intelligence analysis and security risk management positions at the U.S. Department of State, Google, and Lockheed Martin. At the State Department, Greg was a Foreign Affairs Officer with the Overseas Security Advisory Council, where he led analytic teams charged with providing global security information to the U.S. private sector. Greg was also the founding Chair of the D.C. Analysts' Roundtable, a professional organization for practitioners in the fields of intelligence and risk analysis from the private and public sectors.

Greg earned his BA and MA degrees from San Diego State University and Certificate in Executive Corporate Leadership from Georgetown University. His research on international communication and conflict resolution is published in the journals International Negotiation and International Journal of Conflict Resolution as well as in edited scholarly volumes. Greg resides in Arlington, VA, with his wife and their three cats.