

John P. Wickenhiser

Senior Vice President
Homebuilder Banking Group
Wells Fargo & Company

John Wickenhiser is a senior vice president in Wells Fargo's Homebuilder Banking Group.

As one of the nation's leaders in the real estate industry, Wells Fargo provides a comprehensive platform of banking and financing solutions to regional and national owners, operators and developers, real estate funds, and real estate investment trusts (REITs).

John joined Wells Fargo in 1994 as a relationship manager in the Real Estate Managed Assets Group office in Los Angeles. He became an assistant vice president in 1996 and later that year attended the company's Credit Management Training Program in San Francisco. Upon completion of the program in 1997, John joined the Commercial Real Estate office in San Diego. He was promoted to vice president in 1998 and senior vice president in 2005. John was promoted to manage the San Diego Commercial Real Estate office in 2006. John transferred to the newly-formed Homebuilder Banking Group in 2013 and covers multiple territories throughout the western United States.

John earned his B.S. in business administration at San Diego State University. He earned his M.B.A. in finance at the University of Southern California.

Active in a number of professional and community organizations, John serves on the Advisory Board at the Corky McMillin Center for Real Estate at San Diego State University and the Real Estate Committee at the Burnham-Moores Center for Real Estate at the University of San Diego. John also serves as Treasurer and Board Member for Canyon Springs Church.

John and his wife live in San Diego and have two children.